

MY STEM PORTFOLIO

12- TIRMIDHIY

SAFIYYAH HANAN A. LABANG

S.Y 2024-2025

MY STEM PORTFOLIO

12- TIRMIDHIY

SUBMITTED BY: SAFIYYAH HANAN A. LABANG

SUBMITTED TO: MR. EDIMAL T. UPPONG

DATE: MARCH 03 2025

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CONTENT	PAGE NO.
TABLE OF CONTENTS	i
MY STEM PORTFOLIO
Resume.....	1
Objectives of the Study	2
Significance of the Study.....	2
Scope and Delimitation.....	3

RESUME

LABANG, SAFIYYAH HANAN A.

Phase IV Gallera Subd. Guiwan-Putik
0953 044 6560
labangsafiyyah@gmail.com

OBJECTIVE

A committed senior high school student aspiring to co-produce documentary films, dedicated to creating impactful stories as part of a dynamic media company.

EDUCATIONAL ATTAINMENT

Senior High School

Asia Academic School
(Batch 2023–2025)
Don Alfaro St., Tetuan, Zamboanga City,
Philippines

Junior High School

Asia Academic School
(Batch 2017–2021, 2022–2023)
Don Alfaro St., Tetuan, Zamboanga City,
Philippines

Ferndale International School

(Batch 2020–2022)
Alvarez, Veterans Avenue

Primary

Asia Academic School
(Batch 2017–2021)
Don Alfaro St., Tetuan, Zamboanga
City, Philippines

Sarang Bangun Learning Center

(Batch 2014–2017)
Newslane, Baliwasan

International Philippines School of Jeddah

(Batch 2013–2014)
Mushrefah District, Jeddah 23336,
Kingdom of Saudi Arabia

AWARDS AND CERTIFICATION

Secondary

- With High Honors | 2019-2025 (First semester)
- Leadership Award
- Service Award
- Class President (Grades 7, 10–12)
- School President (S.Y 2024-2025)
- Editor-in-chief (S.Y 2024-2025)
- Photojournalism Head (S.Y 2023-2025)
- DSPC 2025 - Photojournalism 1st placer
- Power Writing Year 5 & 6 - Photojournalism merit awardee
- FTTS Math Challenge (Champion) for category 7-8
(S.Y 2019-2020)
- Quipper Top Student (S.Y 2020-2021- S.Y 2023- 2024)
- KCC excellence Award

Primary

- Batch salutatorian (S.Y 2018-2019)
- Aba Model Awardee (2019)
- Board Member (S.Y 2017-2018)
- Consistent Honor Student

SKILLS

- Versatile
- Photography
- Videography
- Video Editing
- Layout
- Public speaking

INTEREST

- Journaling
- Baking
- Watching Films
- Collecting Merch

RESUME REFLECTION

REFLECTION ON RESUME WRITING

Writing a resume is a crucial step in preparing for job applications and career growth. It requires thoughtful planning, organization, and strategic presentation of one's skills and experiences. Through this process, I gained valuable insights into how to showcase my qualifications effectively.

Despite my interest in pursuing a career in the medical field, I also want to follow my passion for filmmaking. Making my resume allowed me to highlight not only my academic background and skills but also my creative pursuits. I organized the document into key sections, including an objective statement, educational attainment, award and certification, skills, and interest ensuring each part reflected my unique strengths.

I emphasized achievements using action-driven descriptions and quantifiable results to demonstrate my impact. Balancing professionalism with creativity, I designed a simple layout that made the resume engaging yet easy to read.

In conclusion, writing a resume helped me reflect on my diverse aspirations and skill sets. It empowered me to present myself confidently, whether pursuing opportunities in the medical field or following my passion for film production.

APPLICATION LETTER

February 11, 2025

SAFIYYAH HANAN A. LABANG

Phase IV Gallera Subd. Guiwan-Putik

Labangsafiyyah@gmail.com

0953 044 6560

Ms. Maria Angelique Regio

Human Resource Specialist, GMA Network, Inc.

EDSA corner Timog Avenue, Diliman, Quezon City, Philippines.

ma.regio@igma.tv

Dear Ms. Regio,

I am writing to express my keen interest in the production assistant position at GMA Network. With a deep passion for documentary production and a solid foundation in photography and videography, I am excited about the opportunity to contribute to your esteemed team.

Throughout my previous roles, I have effectively managed shoots, coordinated operations, and captured high-quality footage, all of which align perfectly with the demands of this position. My strong attention to detail, organizational skills, and passion for storytelling have consistently allowed me to produce engaging and impactful narratives.

What particularly draws me to GMA Network is its unwavering commitment to producing high-quality, socially relevant documentaries that both inform and inspire audiences. I am eager to bring my expertise in documentary filmmaking to your team, adapting to project-specific needs while ensuring impactful and visually engaging content.

I would appreciate the opportunity to discuss how my background and skills align with the needs of your production team. Thank you for considering my application. I look forward to the possibility of contributing to GMA Network's legacy of excellence in documentary production.

Sincerely,

Safiyyah Hanan A. Labang

Applicant

APPLICATION LETTER REFLECTION

REFLECTION ON APPLICATION LETTER WRITING

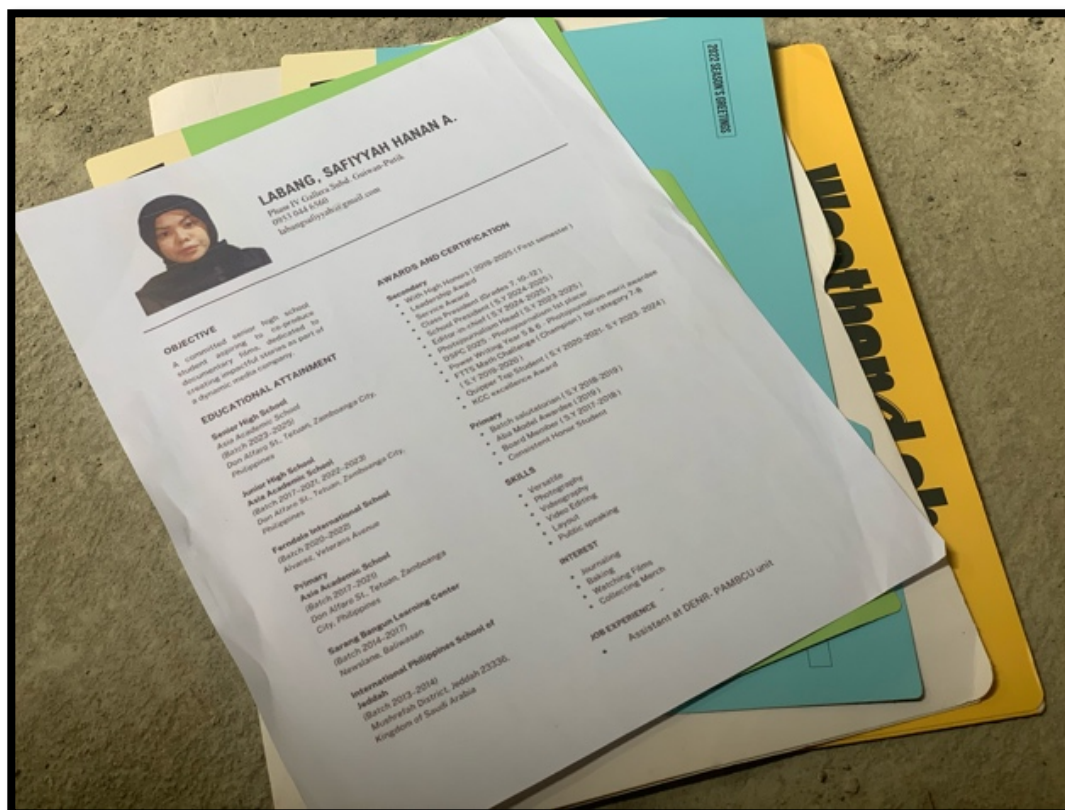

Writing an application letter to GMA was a meaningful experience that allowed me to reflect on my passion for storytelling through film. As someone captivated by the power of visual narratives, I have always admired GMA's ability to shed light on important societal issues through impactful documentaries. Crafting the letter gave me the chance to convey my desire to be part of this creative and socially conscious environment.

In the letter, I highlighted my enthusiasm for producing compelling documentaries that not only entertain but inform and inspire positive change. I emphasized my skills in research, storytelling, and technical production, which I have developed through various creative projects. My fascination with capturing real-life stories and giving a voice to the unheard was at the heart of my message.

While drafting the letter, I faced the challenge of balancing professionalism with authenticity. I wanted to convey both my qualifications and genuine passion for the role. After several revisions, I crafted a letter that authentically represented my aspirations, illustrating how I could contribute to GMA's legacy of high-quality storytelling.

This experience reminded me of the importance of pursuing what truly excites me. Despite having interests in other fields, such as medicine, filmmaking remains a creative outlet where I can merge artistry and purpose. Writing the application letter reaffirmed my commitment to turning this passion into a meaningful career.

JOB INTERVIEW

The day of my job interview with Sir Edimal T. Uppong was a mix of nerves and anticipation. As I walked into the room, I could feel my heart racing a bit, but I reminded myself that I was there for a reason—I had the skills and experiences to back me up. Sir Edimal greeted me with a calm demeanor, which immediately put me at ease, but the nerves still lingered.

We started by discussing my resume. He noted that I had an outstanding record during my senior high school years, which made me feel proud but also a bit humbled. He asked me about my journey through those years and how I managed to maintain such a strong academic standing. I shared with him how I balanced my studies with extracurricular activities, and how those experiences helped shape my work ethic.

Then, the conversation shifted to something I hold very dear—my experience in photojournalism. Sir Edimal asked how I felt after winning in the Division Schools Press Conference (DSPC). I could feel my confidence growing as I spoke about it. I admitted that winning felt surreal at first. I had worked so hard, and when it finally paid off, I was overwhelmed with gratitude.

It was one of those moments where everything clicked, and I realized just how much passion I had for storytelling through images. I told Sir Edimal that winning wasn't just about the recognition; it was the validation that I was on the right path, doing what I loved.

Despite the initial nerves, I found that as we continued talking, I grew more comfortable. I was able to answer with complete honesty, knowing that my experiences spoke for themselves. By the end of the interview, I felt a sense of pride in sharing my journey so openly. While I was nervous at the start, I realized that staying authentic and confident in my own story was the best approach.

JOB INTERVIEW REFLECTION

Writing about my job interview experience with Sir Edimal T. Uppong allowed me to reflect deeply on the entire process and how I handled the nerves and challenges that came with it. Looking back, I realize that the anxiety I initially felt was a natural part of any important interview, but what stood out to me was how I navigated through it. Despite being nervous, I was able to stay grounded and honest, which made the experience more meaningful.

The way Sir Edimal acknowledged my achievements in senior high school and asked about my victory in photojournalism made me appreciate the hard work I'd put into those moments. It wasn't just about what I had done, but about how much those experiences shaped me as a person and professional. I wasn't just recalling facts for the interview, I was reflecting on moments that had a significant impact on my growth.

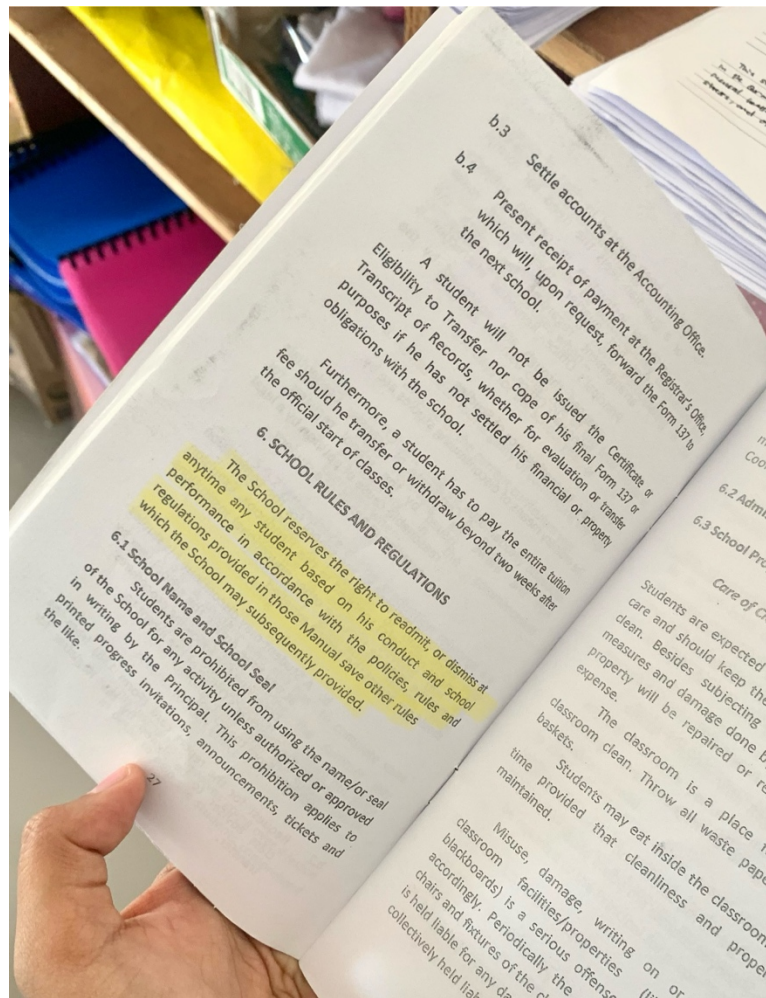

Writing this reflection also helped me appreciate the power of authenticity. Instead of worrying too much about giving the "perfect" answer, I allowed myself to be genuine, which ultimately made me feel more confident. By focusing on being honest about my experiences, I found that I could share my story with pride and clarity.

The process of reflecting on the interview reminded me that every experience, whether nerve-racking or smooth, is an opportunity to grow. I learned that confidence doesn't come from perfection, but from embracing who you are and being true to yourself, even when you're feeling uncertain. This reflection will stick with me as a reminder of how far I've come and how to approach future challenges with the same honesty and confidence.

COMPANY RULES & REGULATION

SCHOOL RULES AND REGULATIONS

The School reserves the right to readmit, or dismiss at anytime any student based on his conduct and school performance in accordance with the policies, rules and regulations provided in those Manual save other rules which the School may subsequently provided.

DENR- CENRO RULES AND REGULATIONS

Office Regulations

a. Office Decorum

1. Wearing of the DENR identification card and ARTA ID is part of office uniform. All DENR officials and employees should wear the prescribed uniform and their ID cards upon entering DENR premises. Violation of this regulation is a ground for disciplinary action..
2. Friday is the designated wash day. On this day, employees may not wear their uniforms provided that they wear office-appropriate attire. wearing of tight jeans, spaghetti-strap blouses, plunging necklines, backless dresses and blouses, short pants, mini-skirt or other skimpy clothing, is inappropriate.
3. All employees shall refrain from wearing slippers in the workplace. Also, it is desirable that all employees stay properly and neatly groomed while in the office.
4. No employee should leave the office without a pass slip duly signed by the concerned chief of the division, section or unit. The purpose, time of departure, and time of return of the employee must be indicated. A copy of the pass slip must be submitted to the Personnel Division.
5. You are required to attend the flag-raising ceremony every Monday at 8:00 a.m. and flag-lowering ceremony every Friday at 4:00 p.m. Willful and repeated absence from this ceremony is a ground for disciplinary action.
6. Your attendance is recorded using the Biometric Attendance System. You are required to make four transactions each day: at your time of arrival: your time-out and time-in during lunch break; and at the time of your departure in the afternoon. Only presidential appointees, duly authorized employees, and consultants are exempted from using the system. However, all absences of such officers must be recorded. You are further required to record your attendance in the logbook maintained in your respective offices. This shall serve as an official alternative document to attest your presence in case of loss of record or failure to log in the biometrics attendance system.

7. For security reasons, all officials and employees are enjoined to use the front main door of the building for entrance and exit purposes.
8. The guards at the entrance and exit door of DENR building have been instructed to inspect handbags and similar items brought inside or out of the building.
9. All employees and officials are prohibited from smoking within the DENR premises. The DENR strictly observes Executive Order No. 26 dated 16 May 2017 which promulgates a smoke-free environments in public and enclosed places.
10. All employees are reminded to extend courteous, prompt, and adequate service to the transacting public. If a visitor cannot be attended to right aay, he the transactino public. how much longer he/she has to wait.
11. Tone down your voice when speaking. No trace of arrogance must be displayed.
12. Telephones are installed in all office. While you may use them for emergency non-official matters, you should not treat the telephones your private connections and indulge in petty and lengthy personal long-distance calls are strictly prohibited.
13. Refrain from using your mobile phones and other electronic gods personal matters during office hours.
14. Computers shall be used for official business purposes only.
15. Nobody should loiter in the lobby or hallways during office hours
16. Reading of newspapers, magazines and other periodicals not relate. official functions is not allowed during office hours.
17. Peddling of merchandise and engaging in personal business vir premises are likewise not allowed.

COMPANY RULES & REGULATION REFLECTION

REFLECTION RULES AND REGULATION OF AAS & DENR-CENRO

Reflecting on the rules and regulations at both DENR-CENRO and Asia Academic School, I see how they help shape professional behavior and create environments conducive to work and learning. At DENR-CENRO, the focus on office decorum, such as wearing the prescribed uniform and ID, emphasizes professionalism. The rules around attire, especially on Fridays, ensure respect for the workplace, reminding employees that the way they present themselves impacts how they are perceived. These rules encourage a respectful atmosphere within the office, which is essential for a productive work environment.

The emphasis on punctuality and attendance, including mandatory flag ceremonies and the use of the biometric system, teaches time management and accountability. I've come to appreciate how these guidelines foster personal responsibility while also promoting a sense of belonging to the institution. Additionally, the security measures, such as guard inspections and the prohibition of smoking, highlight the importance of safety and maintaining order. These rules also encourage courteous interactions with the public, ensuring a welcoming environment for everyone.

Similarly, the school's policy on conduct and performance underscores personal responsibility and the consequences of one's actions. It reinforces the idea that academic institutions, like workplaces, have standards that maintain order and promote a positive environment. Both sets of regulations aim to prioritize respect, responsibility, and professionalism. Reflecting on them, I realize how important it is to follow these rules to contribute to a productive, safe, and respectful atmosphere in both work and school settings.

WORK IMMERSION TASK/ ACTIVITIES

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 1 | January 9, 2024

On the first day of immersion, Ma'am Jehada Rosales, our supervisor, assigned my classmates and I clean the faculty room. I was a bit surprised by the responsibility, but I understood that it was part of the experience. As soon as I entered the room, the dust immediately hit me, and I quickly put on my mask, knowing I'm sensitive to it. The space was filled with scattered papers, books, and some personal items left out on desks, making it feel lived-in yet disorganized, like a small corner of the school's everyday activities.

I began by organizing the area around Ma'am Apsa's table. Papers were piled high, and several pens and other items were scattered across the surface. I carefully arranged them into neat stacks, ensuring everything was orderly. It was a bit overwhelming at first, but I focused on one task at a time, determined to make progress. Slowly, the clutter started to clear, and the space began to feel more manageable.

As I moved around, I noticed other corners of the room with their own messes. Some chairs were out of place, and a few desks had leftover materials from previous lessons. I focused on tidying up these areas, putting everything back where it belonged and wiping down surfaces. Each small step brought a sense of order to the room, which made the work feel more rewarding.

Though cleaning the faculty room wasn't the most glamorous task, I found a sense of accomplishment in it. It was a simple task, but it gave me a deeper appreciation for the environment that teachers work in every day. By the end of the day, the room looked much tidier, and I could sense the difference in the air, cleaner and more inviting.

Reflecting on this experience, I realized that even the most mundane tasks can be meaningful. While it may not have been the task I expected, cleaning the faculty room taught me the value of responsibility and the impact of maintaining a space for others. It was a reminder that sometimes, the smallest actions can make the biggest difference.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 2 | February 13, 2024

On Day 2 of my immersion, I was still assigned to the faculty room with some of my classmates. We continued the cleaning from the previous day, and I could already see a noticeable improvement in the room's condition. I started by washing the rug outside the door, which had accumulated a lot of dust and dirt. It was clear that the rug had not been cleaned in a while, so I took my time to scrub it thoroughly.

Next, we focused on organizing the items left on the tables. Some papers were scattered and other small items were in disarray. I carefully picked up everything and made sure each item had a designated place. It felt important to create an organized environment for the teachers to work in. After a bit of time, the tables were neatly arranged, and the space felt more orderly and productive.

We then moved on to cleaning the shelves, which were filled with books and papers. I carefully dusted each shelf and organized the materials so that everything would be easier to access. It was clear that teachers needed a space where they could find what they needed quickly. Organizing the shelves not only made the room look better but also helped to make it more efficient.

After finishing the shelves, we turned my attention to the windows. I wiped off the dust, and as I cleaned, more sunlight began to shine through. The light made the room feel brighter and more inviting, which was a nice change from the previous dim and dusty atmosphere. It was amazing how much of a difference the sunlight made in brightening up the space. The room seemed much more welcoming and comfortable for the teachers after the simple task of cleaning the windows.

By the end of the day, the faculty room looked significantly better. The entire space felt lighter and more organized, and I could tell that it would be a much more comfortable environment for the teachers. It was rewarding to see how much cleaning and organizing could transform a space. I felt proud of the work I had done and how much we had contributed to improving the faculty room. Leaving for the day, I knew the teachers would appreciate the difference we had made.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School

Day 3 | January 14, 2025

On the third day of my immersion, I was assigned to help prepare for the upcoming Sport Fest. I joined the sports league team, who were busy working on banderitas—colorful flags that would decorate the campus. I was given a stapler and a pile of triangle-shaped banderitas and began stapling them to the straw. It was a simple task, but it felt important as I helped with the preparations.

As I worked, I couldn't help but think back to the Sport Fest at my elementary school in Sarang Bangun. Each class would make its own banderitas for the event, creating a colorful display throughout the school. The tradition of making these bright flags always excited me, and I recalled how much effort we put into creating them. That memory made me feel even more connected to the task at hand.

Helping with the decorations felt like contributing to a similar tradition at this school. It was nice to be part of something familiar. We each took turns stapling, chatting about the event, and sharing ideas for other decorations. The simple task of making banderitas felt meaningful, especially knowing how much these small details would contribute to the overall atmosphere of the festival.

By the end of the day, we had a stack of banderitas ready to be hung around the campus. The colorful flags were a visual representation of the upcoming event, and seeing them come together made me look forward to the Sport Fest even more. It was exciting to see how these small traditions could unite everyone in preparation for a big event.

The experience also taught me the value of teamwork and shared traditions. Working with my classmates, we were able to create something that would make the Sport Fest more enjoyable for everyone. It was amazing to see how a simple task like making banderitas could bring so much excitement and energy to the school. I left for the day feeling proud of the work we had done. It reminded me that every contribution, no matter how small, plays a part in making an event special.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 4 | January 15, 2025

On Day 4 of our work immersion, our supervisor provided us with a one-day pass to focus on completing all the requirements for our upcoming deployment outside the campus. This day was important for us to make sure we had all the necessary documents in order. I had already finished my medical check-up a week earlier, which meant I only had to focus on obtaining my barangay clearance and police clearance.

The first stop was to secure my barangay clearance. I went to the barangay hall, where the process was relatively quick and simple. I filled out a short form, paid the required fee, and waited for a few minutes while the clearance was being processed. The staff were efficient, and in no time, I was able to get the clearance I needed. This was one of the easier tasks, and it didn't take much time to complete.

After finishing the barangay clearance, I headed to the police station to get my police clearance. The process was a bit more time-consuming, as there were more people in line, but the staff handled everything well. I submitted my requirements, including a valid ID and the application form, and waited for my turn. It took a little longer than expected, but after a short wait, I was able to receive my police clearance. I was relieved to have both documents ready before the end of the day.

By the time I finished gathering both clearances, it was already afternoon, and I had completed all my requirements. It felt like a huge weight had been lifted off my shoulders knowing I was now ready for the next step of our work immersion. I took this time to double-check the documents to make sure there were no issues or missing details. With everything in order, I felt prepared for the deployment outside the campus that would soon follow.

Overall, Day 4 was productive and gave me the opportunity to finalize all the necessary requirements before the next phase of our work immersion. Although the process of securing the clearances took some time, I was able to manage everything efficiently. Now that everything was settled, I could focus on the learning experience that awaited me in the actual work setting. This day served as a reminder of how essential organization and planning are in ensuring everything goes smoothly.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 5 | January 16, 2025

On the fifth day of my work immersion, I was assigned to the SBO store. However, there wasn't much for me to do there, so I was stationed at the store mainly because there was a spare laptop available. My immersion supervisor informed me that I would be editing videos for the day, a task requested by the administration. I was excited because this allowed me to apply my skills in a more creative and technical way.

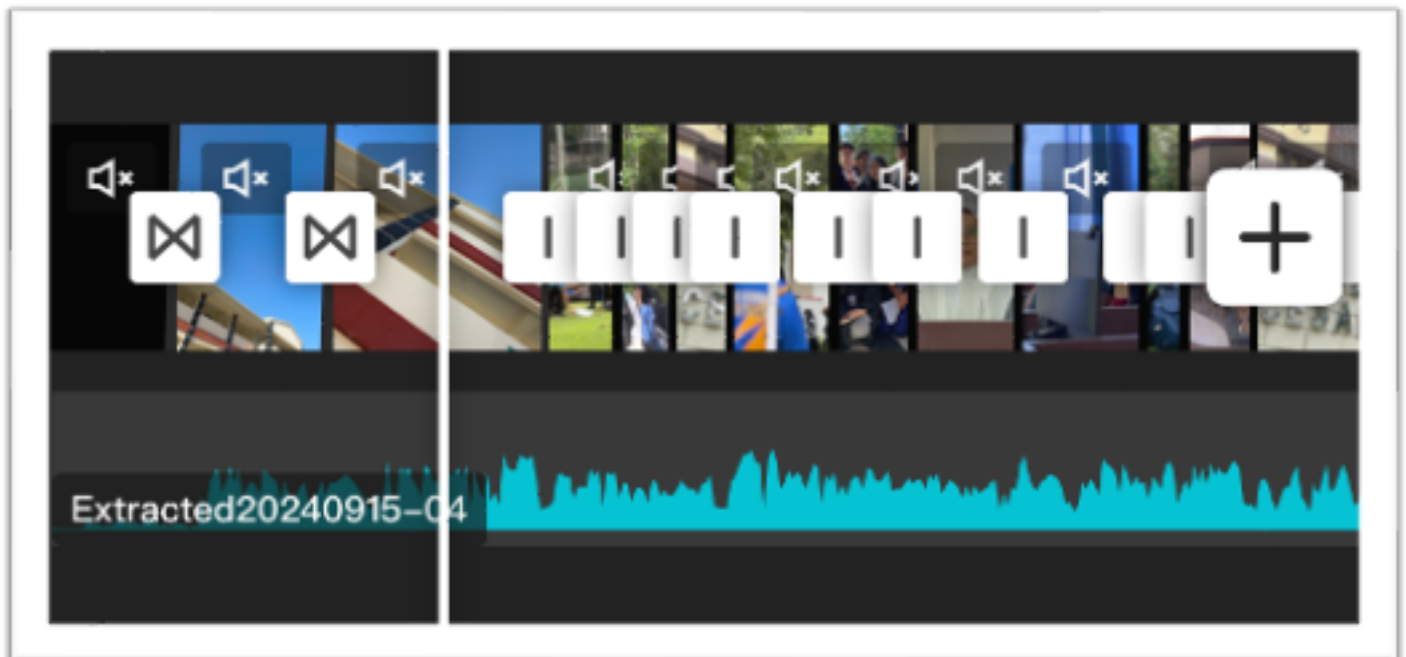

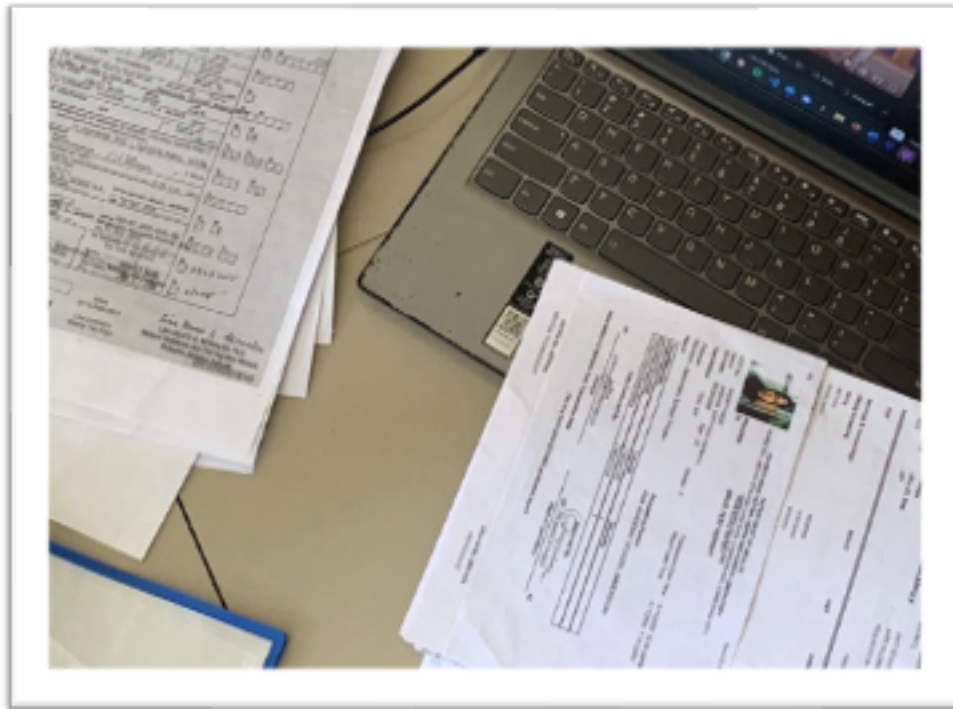

My task for the day was to edit videos related to various school activities. I carefully reviewed the raw footage, trimming it to remove unnecessary parts and making sure the video flowed smoothly. I also adjusted the audio levels to ensure that the sound was clear and balanced, which helped improve the overall quality of the video. This process required attention to detail, and I made sure to focus on every aspect of the video to ensure it was polished.

Throughout the day, I worked diligently to meet the standards set by the administration. I made sure to ask for feedback when necessary, ensuring that the videos met the requirements and were ready for final submission. The task helped me realize how important it is to be precise and organized when working on projects, especially when deadlines are involved.

Although I didn't do much work at the SBO store, I found the video editing task both engaging and rewarding. It was a great opportunity to apply my creativity and learn more about the technical aspects of video production. I realized how much effort goes into creating a professional video, from organizing the footage to fine-tuning the audio and visuals.

Overall, Day 4 of my work immersion was a productive and educational experience. While I didn't have much to do at the SBO store, the opportunity to focus on video editing allowed me to grow and refine my skills. I left the day with a sense of accomplishment, knowing that I had made progress in learning new tools and techniques. This experience reinforced my interest in media production and opened my eyes to the work involved in creating content for a school setting.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 6 | January 17, 2025

On the sixth day of my work immersion, I continued working on the video editing tasks that had been assigned to me the previous day. I focused on refining the videos, making sure that all the footage was well-edited and aligned with the administration's expectations. I also worked on adding final touches to the video, adjusting the color and sound to enhance the overall quality.

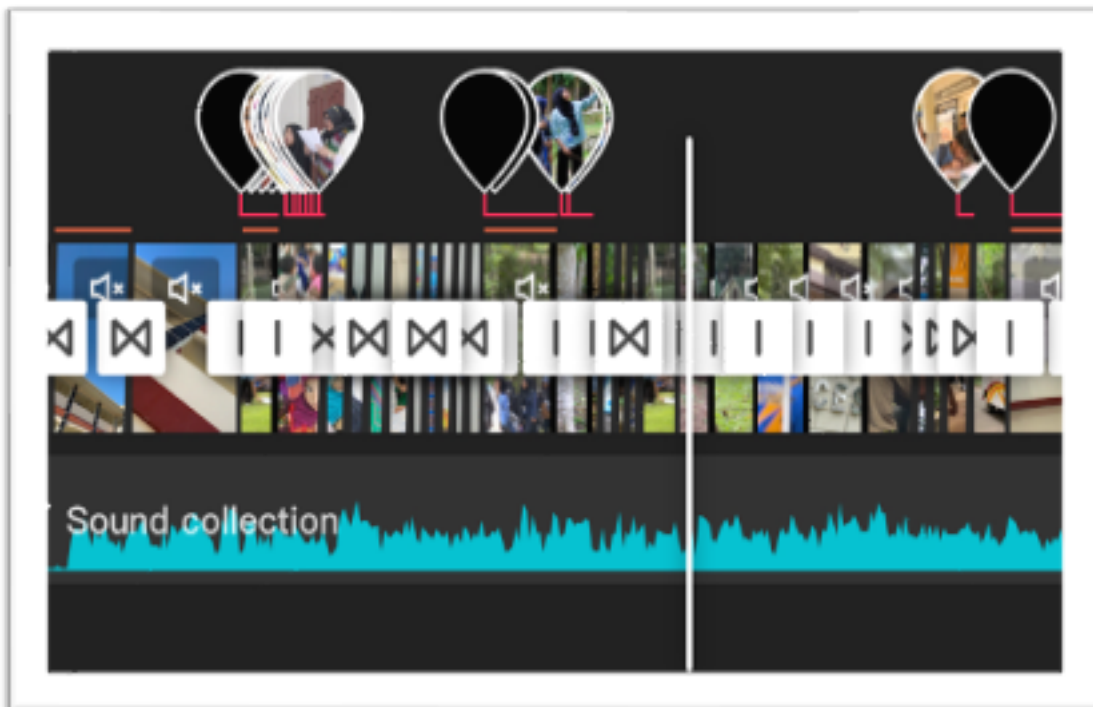

In addition to video editing, I also spent part of the day completing some requirements for my work immersion. I had to gather and photocopy important documents like my police clearance, medical certificate, and barangay certificate. This was an essential part of the immersion process, as these documents were needed to fulfill the administrative requirements for the deployment.

The completion of these requirements allowed me to understand the importance of paperwork and documentation in professional settings. It gave me a sense of responsibility and taught me how to manage multiple tasks at once. I also realized how crucial it is to stay organized and ensure that all documents are accurate and complete when handling official matters.

As the day went on, I felt a sense of accomplishment in both the editing work and the completion of the required documents. I was able to balance creative tasks with administrative ones, which helped me develop better time-management skills. These experiences were valuable, as they allowed me to see how different aspects of work immersion contribute to both personal growth and fulfilling necessary requirements.

Overall, Day 5 was a productive and fulfilling day. The combination of video editing and handling paperwork gave me a well-rounded experience, allowing me to learn not only technical skills but also the importance of organization and attention to detail. By completing both tasks efficiently, I felt a sense of achievement, and the day further enhanced my understanding of the diverse responsibilities involved in work immersion.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 7 | January 20, 2025

On Day 7 of my immersion, I continued the editing work I started on Day 5. I had made significant progress, but the process became more challenging as I juggled editing between my phone and laptop. I found myself switching devices frequently, trying to make sure the video's quality consistent.. Editing on my phone was convenient, but it lacked the full functionality and screen size I needed to ensure every detail was perfect.

The more I worked on the video, the more I realized how much effort it took to maintain the quality. While editing on my phone allowed me to make quick changes, I needed to constantly check the results on my laptop to ensure the video looked good on a bigger screen. This back-and-forth became time-consuming, and I had to stay focused to avoid missing any small mistakes.

As the day went on, I got more accustomed to the process and started managing my time better. I developed a rhythm where I'd do quick edits on my phone and then review them on my laptop. This workflow helped me stay on track and ensured I didn't miss any important details. It was still tiring, but I began to see the video come together, which made the effort feel worthwhile. My confidence grew as I refined the video, even though the process remained a bit hectic.

Despite the challenges, I noticed the quality of the video improving with every edit. I carefully adjusted the color grading, transitions, and audio to match the vision I had in mind. Each change added more polish, and I could see how my work was making a difference. While it was sometimes frustrating to work across different devices, the satisfaction of seeing the progress kept me motivated.

By the end of the day, I felt proud of what I had accomplished, despite the challenges I faced. The video was much closer to being finished. Although editing on both my phone and laptop had its struggles, it helped me become more adaptable and patient with my work. I left for the day feeling accomplished, knowing that the video was nearly ready for completion. The experience was a reminder that persistence and attention to detail are key in any editing project.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 8 | January 21, 2025

On Day 8 of my immersion, I was assigned to the Student Body Organization (SBO) store, where I was tasked with overseeing the store while it was open. The SBO store was a small but lively corner of the school where students could buy various snacks and services. My job was to ensure everything ran smoothly, handle transactions, and assist customers. As I stood behind the window, I could feel the buzz of energy from the students coming and going.

At first, I was a bit nervous about handling money and making sure everything was stocked properly, but I quickly got into the rhythm of it. I learned how to take orders, calculate the total cost, and give change with a smile. The students were friendly, and it felt nice to be able to offer them something to snack on between classes. It was a simple job, but it kept me on my toes and taught me the importance of maintaining order.

As the day went on, I began to notice the patterns of students' purchases. Some would come in for chips, while others preferred juice or candies. It was interesting to see what snacks were popular and how the store catered to the students' needs. This experience helped me understand the logistics of running a small store and how important it is to know your customers.

I also had the chance to chat with some of the regulars, who would stop by daily for their favorite snacks. It was rewarding to be part of the process and to know that I was contributing to the SBO store's operation. The task felt more engaging than I initially thought, and I could see how running the store was a valuable experience in teamwork and responsibility.

At the end of my shift, I felt proud of the work I had done. The SBO store was buzzing with activity, and I had played a role in keeping it running smoothly. I realized that even tasks like working in a school store are important in teaching responsibility and communication. As I reflected on the day, I appreciated the opportunity to learn about the behind-the-scenes operations of the school and how something as simple as managing a store can create a sense of community.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 9 | January 22, 2025

On day 9 of my work immersion, I was still assigned to handle the SBO store, as the faculty office was already clean and organized. Despite the store being relatively straightforward, the day turned out to be a bit stressful due to the printing service we offer. There was a constant flow of customers needing their documents printed, and I found myself managing both the sales and the printing requests. While the workload felt overwhelming at times, I knew I had to keep everything running smoothly to ensure good service.

As I worked through the day, I felt the pressure of managing both tasks at once, especially with the printing service being such a high demand. I was trying to balance helping customers at the counter while ensuring the printing tasks were done promptly. It was a challenge to keep everything in order, but I found that staying organized and focused helped me get through it. Though stressful, I managed to stay calm and handled the situation better than I expected.

Despite the stress, I managed to ace the day, and our sales remained strong, which was a great accomplishment. I learned the importance of multitasking and maintaining composure under pressure. The constant flow of customers kept me on my toes, but I felt satisfied knowing I was handling the store efficiently. By the end of the day, I realized I had learned a lot about balancing responsibilities and providing quality customer service.

I also realized how crucial teamwork is, even when you're working independently. My colleagues were supportive, checking in on me when things got particularly busy. Their willingness to help when needed made all the difference in getting through a hectic day. I felt more confident in handling stressful situations, knowing I could rely on my team if needed.

Overall, day 9 of my immersion was a learning experience that tested my ability to handle multiple tasks at once. While the stress of managing the printing service added some pressure, I was able to overcome it and keep the sales up. I left the day feeling accomplished and more prepared for future challenges. This experience taught me valuable lessons in time management, customer service, and staying calm under pressure.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 10 | January 30, 2025

On day 10 of my work immersion, most of my classmates were busy finalizing the banderitas for an upcoming event, while I stayed behind with Radia in the room. Our task for the day was to clean the room, which had become a bit of a disaster due to the entrep selling season. With so many things going on in the office, it was clear that cleaning the space had been neglected for a while. Although it was a big task, we were determined to make sure everything was organized and presentable by the end of the day.

As we began our cleaning tasks, it was clear how much work needed to be done. The room had piles of papers, misplaced supplies, and dust in every corner, making it a bit overwhelming. Despite the mess, we tackled the task step by step, organizing files and wiping down surfaces. It felt satisfying to see the room slowly transform into a more organized and functional space.

Even though it was hard work, I found that the cleaning task was very rewarding. The process of restoring order to the room gave me a sense of accomplishment, knowing I was contributing to a better work environment. Radia and I worked well together, staying focused and efficient throughout the day. We kept a steady pace, ensuring that the job was done thoroughly and that no corner was left untouched.

By the end of the day, the room was completely clean and organized, and I felt proud of what we had accomplished. The room, once chaotic and cluttered, now looked neat and ready for the next wave of work. Our hard work definitely paid off, and it was clear that a clean environment would make it easier for everyone to work. It felt great to know that our task was essential in creating a more productive and pleasant workspace.

In the end, the work immersion task compensated for the hard work we put in, as the room was now in excellent condition. While my classmates were busy with their tasks outside, I felt satisfied knowing that our work had contributed to the overall success of the office. It was a day of hard work, but it also taught me the importance of maintaining a clean and organized space. I left the room feeling accomplished, ready to face whatever challenges the next day would bring.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 11 | January 31, 2025

On Day 11 of my work immersion, the whole class was busy with the entrep selling activity, as it was part of our other subject. The day was quite hectic due to the numerous customers and the fast-paced environment. As the selling activity continued, I was once again tasked with cleaning the room during immersion time. Despite this, I understood the importance of keeping the room clean, especially when its time for other subjects.

After my immersion hours ended, I continued cleaning to ensure that everything was in order for the next day. It was a tiring responsibility, but I knew it was necessary to maintain a clean environment for both the team and the customers. I cleaned all areas of the room, ensuring the floors, tables, and counters were spotless. Though it was an additional task after a busy day, I took pride in doing it well.

Cleaning after hours also gave me time to reflect on the day's events. Although I was primarily involved in cleaning, I saw how essential it was to create a neat and welcoming space for both customers and staff. It made me appreciate the importance of every task, no matter how small, in ensuring the smooth flow of daily activities.

By past 5pm I had finished the cleaning and ensured that everything was neat and ready for the next day. It had been a long and busy day, but I felt accomplished knowing I had contributed in some way to maintaining an organized environment. After completing my task, I was ready to head home, reflecting on the day's experiences.

In conclusion, Day 11 taught me the value of being adaptable and responsible, even when tasks change unexpectedly. While I had hoped to be more involved in the entrepreneurial aspect, I learned that maintaining cleanliness and order is just as important in creating a productive atmosphere. The day reinforced the idea that every role, no matter how simple, plays a crucial part in the success of a project or business.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 12 | February 3, 2025

Day 12 of my work immersion was quite similar to Day 11, as it was another busy day for our entrepreneurial selling activity. The room was filled with customers, and the environment was hectic, requiring quick thinking and constant attention. Due to the nature of the day, I was once again assigned to clean the room, as it had become cluttered from the ongoing activity. Although I had hoped to participate in other tasks, I understood that keeping the workspace tidy was just as important for the overall success of the day.

After my regular immersion hours, I continued cleaning the room to ensure it was organized and presentable. I swept the floors, wiped down surfaces, and rearranged the materials that had been used for selling. It was tiring, but I knew that maintaining cleanliness in such a busy environment would help everyone work more efficiently. Despite the repetitive nature of the task, I took pride in completing it to the best of my ability.

Cleaning after hours gave me a moment to reflect on the day's events. Even though I wasn't involved in the selling itself, I recognized how important it was to keep the environment clean and welcoming. A tidy space not only looks more professional but also ensures that everything is in order for the next day's activities. This experience reinforced my understanding that every task, no matter how small, contributes to the smooth functioning of the workplace.

By the time I finished cleaning, it was once again well past 5 p.m., and I had ensured the room was ready for the next day. It had been another long and tiring day, but I felt satisfied knowing that I had helped maintain a clean and organized environment. As I wrapped up and prepared to head home, I reflected on the lessons I had learned throughout the day.

In conclusion, Day 12 taught me the importance of being flexible and responsible, even when tasks are repetitive or not what I initially expected. Although cleaning the room wasn't the most exciting task, it was necessary for keeping the work environment functional and efficient. The day further emphasized the value of every role in a team, no matter how small it may seem.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School

Day 13 | February 4, 2025

On day 13 of my work immersion, I was assigned to clean the SBO store, which had become quite messy after two groups from the Entrepreneurship subject used it for cooking. The smell in the store had changed drastically, and it was clear that the area needed a deep clean. The food preparations from the two groups had left behind remnants and lingering odors, so it was important to restore the store to its original, clean state. With the task ahead, we rolled up our sleeves and got to work, determined to freshen up the space.

Cleaning the store was a bit challenging due to the strong smell and the food stains left behind. We started by wiping down the surfaces and cleaning the floors to remove any grease or spills from the cooking activities. The smell was tough to get rid of, but we used air fresheners and cleaned every corner thoroughly to make sure it was well-ventilated. Slowly but surely, the store began to smell fresher and look cleaner as we tackled each area.

As we continued with the cleaning, I realized how important it is to maintain cleanliness in a shared space. The cooking activities had turned the store into a bit of a mess, but with a focused effort, we were able to restore it to its original state. It felt rewarding to see the transformation as the store went from cluttered and smelly to neat and welcoming. Working together, we made sure everything was cleaned properly and that the store was ready for its next use.

By the end of the day, the SBO store looked much better, and the smell had finally dissipated. It felt good to know that we had put in the effort to make the store a more pleasant environment for future use. The store was now clean and fresh, and I was glad we could contribute to making the space more inviting. It was a small but important task that helped maintain the overall cleanliness of the work environment.

In the end, the task of cleaning the SBO store was a success, and I felt proud of the work we had done. It was a reminder of how important it is to keep shared spaces clean and organized, especially when they are used for different activities. With the store now in great condition, I was happy to have helped improve the space. It felt great to leave for the day knowing the store was clean and ready for use again.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 14 | February 5, 2025

On day 13 of my work immersion, I was assigned to clean the SBO store, which had become quite messy after two groups from the Entrepreneurship subject used it for cooking. The smell in the store had changed drastically, and it was clear that the area needed a deep clean. The food preparations from the two groups had left behind remnants and lingering odors, so it was important to restore the store to its original, clean state. With the task ahead, we rolled up our sleeves and got to work, determined to freshen up the space.

Cleaning the store was a bit challenging due to the strong smell and the food stains left behind. We started by wiping down the surfaces and cleaning the floors to remove any grease or spills from the cooking activities. The smell was tough to get rid of, but we used air fresheners and cleaned every corner thoroughly to make sure it was well-ventilated. Slowly but surely, the store began to smell fresher and look cleaner as we tackled each area.

As we continued with the cleaning, I realized how important it is to maintain cleanliness in a shared space. The cooking activities had turned the store into a bit of a mess, but with a focused effort, we were able to restore it to its original state. It felt rewarding to see the transformation as the store went from cluttered and smelly to neat and welcoming. Working together, we made sure everything was cleaned properly and that the store was ready for its next use.

By the end of the day, the SBO store looked much better, and the smell had finally dissipated. It felt good to know that we had put in the effort to make the store a more pleasant environment for future use. The store was now clean and fresh, and I was glad we could contribute to making the space more inviting. It was a small but important task that helped maintain the overall cleanliness of the work environment.

In the end, the task of cleaning the SBO store was a success, and I felt proud of the work we had done. It was a reminder of how important it is to keep shared spaces clean and organized, especially when they are used for different activities. With the store now in great condition, I was happy to have helped improve the space. It felt great to leave for the day knowing the store was clean and ready for use again.

Work Immersion Narrative at Asia Academic School
Day 15 | February 6, 2025

Day 15 marked the final day of my work immersion, even though the program was originally set to end on Day 17. I had missed two days due to being hospitalized, so I had to catch up on the tasks I had fallen behind on. Despite the setback, I was determined to complete my work and meet the expectations set for me. Today, I focused on finalizing the project and making sure everything was ready for submission.

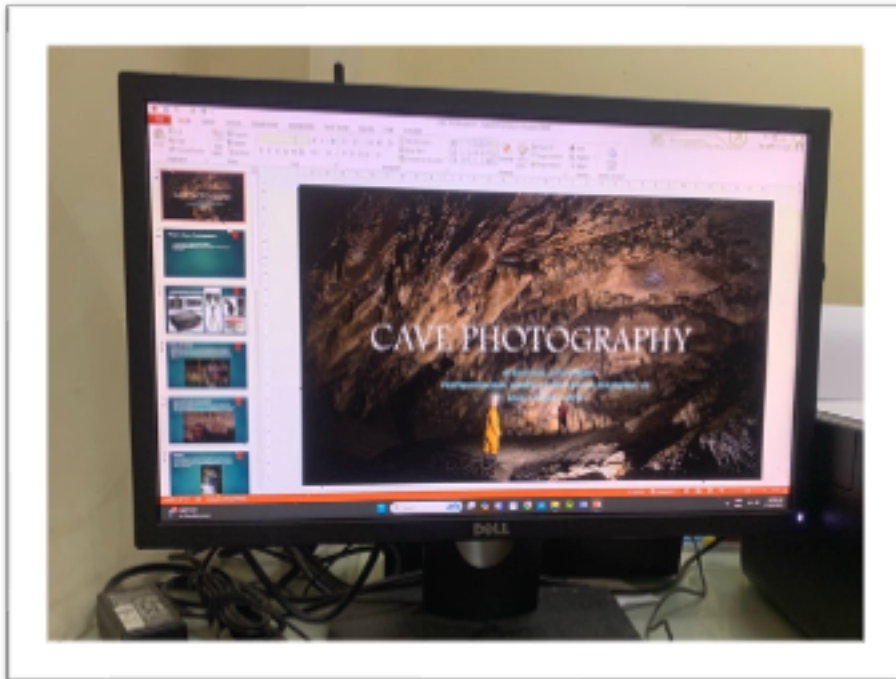

Throughout the day, I worked on editing the project and adding the necessary final touches. I reviewed all the details carefully to ensure that nothing was overlooked and everything was aligned with the given instructions. Since I was aware that the admin needed to check the work before final submission, I wanted to make sure it was polished and complete. I was also mindful of making the work presentable, as I wanted to leave a good impression.

Given the short amount of time, I decided to stay for overtime to ensure that I could finish everything on schedule. I used this additional time wisely, paying attention to minor corrections and reviewing the final draft thoroughly. It was important to me that the work met the standards of the school and was ready for the admin's review. Staying overtime allowed me to deliver my best effort, even under the time constraints.

By the time I finished, I felt a sense of accomplishment knowing that I had completed the project on time, despite the unexpected interruption. I submitted the work to the admin for review, confident that I had put in the necessary effort to meet the expectations. The experience taught me how to manage my time more effectively, especially in situations where unforeseen events occur. I also learned the value of perseverance and dedication in completing tasks.

In conclusion, while the immersion was cut short due to my hospitalization, I was still able to gain valuable experience and complete my tasks successfully. The overtime I worked allowed me to finish strong and ensured that my project was ready for review. This experience not only taught me technical skills but also helped me develop a greater sense of responsibility and work ethic. I am grateful for the opportunity to immerse myself in a real-world setting and look forward to applying what I learned in future endeavors.

Work Immersion Narrative at DENR-CENRO Day 1 | February 17, 2025

My first day at DENR-CENRO was a blend of learning, hands-on activities, and settling into the new environment. The day started with an orientation session where I was introduced to the team and briefed about the mission, vision, and mandate of the agency. Since I was assigned to the protected area management and biodiversity conservation unit, I received detailed information about their objectives and conservation efforts.

After the orientation, I had the opportunity to learn about cave photography. The PowerPoint presentation I viewed was both fascinating and educational, combining the technical aspects of photography with environmental conservation principles. I learned how to capture the intricate details of caves while ensuring their protection and preservation. It was also a privilege to meet Sir Leo, the talented photographer behind many of the stunning images showcased by DENR-Zamboanga City..

In the afternoon, I took part in some cleaning tasks around the office, helping maintain the overall upkeep of the facility. These simple tasks allowed me to contribute to the office environment and get familiar with the workspace. Additionally, Miss Joan asked me to deliver personal data sheets to the administration, which was a good opportunity to interact with other staff members and observe the inner workings of the office.

Throughout the day, I was able to observe the team's dedication to their work and the impact of their conservation efforts. I was impressed by how every task, no matter how small, contributed to the larger goal of protecting the environment. The staff were welcoming and eager to share their knowledge, which made me feel comfortable asking questions. This collaborative atmosphere gave me a sense of belonging and excitement for what's to come.

Overall, my first day at DENR was engaging and insightful. I gained a deeper understanding of the agency's work and the significance of environmental conservation. I'm excited to continue my work immersion and contribute to the important work being done here. This experience is already proving to be a valuable opportunity for personal and professional growth. I look forward to gaining more knowledge and contributing to the mission of CENRO-DENR Zamboanga in the coming days.

Work Immersion Narrative at DENR-CENRO
Day 2 | February 18, 2025

On the second day of my immersion at CENRO-DENR, I spent the morning organizing papers within the department. I cleaned, stacked, and carefully arranged files that had been scattered across the office space. This task was not only necessary for maintaining order but also allowed me to observe the inner workings of the department. It gave me insight into the importance of keeping files and records well-organized.

In the afternoon, we had student visitors from Zamboanga State College of Marine Science and Technology (ZCSMST), who brought with them files of amphibians and reptiles they had captured. The students were particularly focused on snakes and frogs, and they requested data on these species to support their research and conservation projects. Their visit showcased the collaborative relationship between academic institutions and DENR, where the department plays a crucial role in providing essential data for research.

While observing the interaction between the students and professional employees, I began to appreciate even more the importance of conservation efforts. I saw how different units within the department, from administration to research, work together to ensure that biodiversity is properly documented and preserved. It also highlighted the complexity of the department's work and how each role, no matter how small, contributes to the larger mission of protecting the environment.

The interaction with the students also gave me a deeper understanding of the type of data and research that plays a key role in biodiversity conservation. I saw how vital it is for researchers to have access to accurate and up-to-date information to support their work on endangered species. The department's role in assisting these researchers by providing essential data helped me see how conservation work extends beyond just protecting habitats.

Overall, the second day of my immersion provided me with a better understanding of the diverse responsibilities at DENR. From administrative tasks to supporting research projects, I saw how every part of the department contributes to its mission to protect and conserve the environment. The day's events deepened my appreciation for the importance of organization, data management, and collaboration in the field of environmental conservation. I am excited to continue learning from the department and contributing to its work in the coming days.

Work Immersion Narrative at DENR-CENRO
Day 3 | February 19, 2025

On my third day at CENRO-DENR, I arrived at the office early, as usual, logging in before the rest of the team. With everyone still not in yet, I took the initiative to clean the office, making sure everything was tidy and in order for the day ahead. This little routine of starting the day by creating a clean and welcoming environment became my own small contribution. It helped me feel more settled and gave me a sense of responsibility as I began to take ownership of my workspace.

As the day went on, I started to feel more comfortable with my workmates. Even though they were mostly Christians, they were always kind and inclusive, constantly reminding us to pray once the designated prayer time arrived. These small gestures made me feel like part of the team, and it was clear that faith was an important aspect of their work culture. The unity and peace that faith brought to the office environment were something I truly appreciated.

My third day wasn't too different from the first and second. The work was consistent, with cleaning, organizing files, and assisting Ma'am Jacky, Joan, and Sir Jerry with whatever they needed. While these tasks felt repetitive at times, I didn't mind because they allowed me to understand the flow of work and the responsibilities within the office. Each day, I became more familiar with the team's rhythm and my role within it.

As I continued with the routine, I began to feel that my contributions, though small, were still valuable. It was satisfying to assist with tasks and become more involved in the daily operations of the office. I started to understand how every small task fit into the larger picture of the department's work. By the end of the day, I felt like I was growing into my role and making progress in my work immersion.

By the end of the day, I realized that the simple routine was becoming more comforting and less intimidating. It felt like the first signs of me settling into this new chapter, surrounded by supportive and friendly colleagues. I was starting to feel like a part of the team, and the office environment no longer seemed unfamiliar. This sense of comfort and belonging reassured me that I was on the right path.

Work Immersion Narrative at DENR-CENRO
Day 4 | February 20, 2025

Today was my second-to-last day at my work immersion, and it really hit me how much I've grown comfortable with everyone here in such a short amount of time. Even though I've only been here for a few days, they made me feel like I've been part of the team for much longer. From the very beginning, their kindness and warmth helped me settle in quickly. I never expected to feel this connected to a team in such a short period.

From the start, they've always been so kind and welcoming, especially with their daily snacks that they'd share with me. It really made me feel appreciated and welcomed in a way that I wasn't expecting. The small acts of kindness they extended helped me feel comfortable in an unfamiliar environment. These gestures truly made me feel like I was part of something bigger than just my tasks and responsibilities.

To show our gratitude, we decided to treat them to taho today. It was our way of giving back for all the little treats they've given us throughout our time here. It felt good to offer something back, even though it was small compared to their kindness. Seeing them enjoy our little gift made me feel even more connected to the team.

The office always felt light with them, and I'm always thankful for that. The positive energy in the office made every task seem less daunting and more enjoyable. I appreciated how they maintained a cheerful atmosphere, even during busy or stressful moments. Their good spirits made a lasting impression on me and contributed to a welcoming work environment.

Tomorrow is my last day, and I can already feel that it's going to be hard to say goodbye. The people here have made my time so memorable, and I'm truly grateful for everything they've done for me. It will be bittersweet to leave, as this experience has been my first work exposure. I'm going to miss them but will always cherish the memories from my time here.

Work Immersion Narrative at DENR-CENRO
Day 5 | February 21, 2025

My last day at CENRO-DENR was by far the busiest yet happiest day of my entire immersion experience. The morning began just like any other, but little did I know, it would turn into an unforgettable adventure. I was eager to see what the day would bring, and by the time we got started, I could already feel the excitement in the air. I knew it was going to be a special day filled with new experiences.

When we arrived at the office, Sir Leo greeted us and asked if we wanted to join him and Ma'am Joan for a trip to the city hall. There was going to be an exhibit there, and we all excitedly agreed to tag along. As we walked through the exhibit, we learned about the different bird species found in Mindanao. It was a great opportunity to deepen our understanding of local wildlife.

In the afternoon, Sir Jerry took us to the ZSCMST Bird Sanctuary, which was another highlight of the day. We learned about various bird species and their habitats, and I was fascinated by the binoculars used for birdwatching. Sir Jerry shared many interesting facts that made the experience more enriching. As a photography enthusiast, I was thrilled to see the high-end cameras Sir Thirty brought, and I could already imagine capturing the birds and the sanctuary through a lens.

The best part of the afternoon was connecting with nature in such a peaceful and informative setting. The bird sanctuary offered a serene environment, which helped me appreciate the importance of preserving natural spaces. It was a beautiful reminder of why environmental conservation matters. Being surrounded by the birds and the lush greenery made me even more passionate about protecting these habitats.

Later that day, we attended a seminar, and as a sweet surprise, we were given cute gift tokens. This small but thoughtful gesture made the day even more special and memorable. During the seminar, we also had the chance to meet other students from Pilar, and I made new friends, which was a wonderful way to end my immersion. As I reflected on everything I learned and experienced, I felt deeply grateful for the opportunity to be a part of such a meaningful journey.

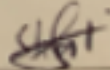

DTR
(ASIA ACADEMIC SCHOOL)

No. _____		Pay Ending _____
Name Labang, Sayinwah Hana		Position _____
Dept. _____		Age _____

Hours	Rate	Amount	DEDUCTIONS	ABSENCES
Reg.				Fines
Over.				Withholding Tax
				SSS
Total Earnings
Less Deductions
NET PAY				TOTAL

Days	MORNING		AFTERNOON		OVERTIME		Daily Total
	IN	OUT	IN	OUT	IN	OUT
1	01-09-25		11:50	3:10
2	8:30	9:50	01-13-25
3	01-14-25		11:50	3:00
4	8:30	9:30	01-15-25
5	01-16-25		11:50	3:14
6	10:45	11:45	01-17-25
7	8:40	9:50	01-20-25
8	01-21-25		2:00	3:01
9	8:35	9:45	01-22-25
10	1:59	2:39	01-30-25
11	10:45	11:45	01-31-25
12	8:35	9:35	2-3-25
13	02-4-25		1:52	2:57
14	8:30	10:40	02-05-25
15	02-06-25		1:52	3:00

I hereby certify that the above records are true and correct.

 EMPLOYEE'S SIGNATURE

DTR REFLECTION

Filling out my DTR (Daily Time Record) for school work became an essential part of my routine, but it wasn't always smooth sailing. I often found myself getting caught up in the tasks at hand, losing track of time, and forgetting to log in and out as I should. Thankfully, I had Radia, who became my reminder system.

Radia was always there, patiently reminding me whenever I forgot to log in at the start of the day or log out when I finished my tasks. I can't count the number of times I'd be deep in concentration, thinking about assignments, only for her to gently nudge me with a quick reminder to fill out my DTR. At first, I was a bit embarrassed that I needed to be reminded so often, but I quickly realized that having someone like Radia around was actually a huge help.

As the days went on, I became more mindful of the time and started getting into the habit of filling out my DTR without needing as much help. But I was still grateful for Radia's gentle reminders. It helped me stay on track, not just with logging my hours, but also with staying focused on the tasks at hand. Without her, I probably would've missed out on several important entries, which would've thrown off my whole schedule.

Looking back, I'm really thankful for her constant support. It wasn't just about the DTR, but about the way Radia helped me develop better habits. She taught me how important it is to stay organized and keep track of things, especially when balancing multiple responsibilities. With her help, I've learned to be more diligent about managing my time and staying consistent with my routines—valuable lessons that will stick with me for a long time.

DTR
(DENR-CENRO)

No. _____ Pay Ending _____ 20__

Name Safiyah Hosen Labrag Position _____

Dept. PAMBCU - CENRO Age 18

Hours	Rate	Amount	DEDUCTIONS	ABSENCES
Reg.				Fines
Over.				Withholding Tax
				S.S.S.
Total Earnings
Less Deductions
NET PAY				TOTAL

Days	MORNING		AFTERNOON		OVERTIME		Daily Total
	IN	OUT	IN	OUT	IN	OUT
1	9:16	11:50	12:51	5:20			01/17/25
2	8:01	12:00	1:00	5:02			01/18/25
3	7:30	12:00	12:50	5:00			01/19/25
4	7:20	12:00	12:47	5:00			01/20/25
5	8:30	12:00	12:56	5:10			01/21/25
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15

I hereby certify that the above records are true and correct.

INFINUS
800 822 Company South Korea (Seoul) City, Company Code

 EMPLOYEE'S SIGNATURE

MADE IN KOREA

DTR REFLECTION

Filling up my DTR (Daily Time Record) at DENR-CENRO was an experience that taught me a lot about time management and efficiency. At first, I was a bit overwhelmed by the process, especially since time was being closely monitored. I wasn't used to having my schedule so strictly accounted for, but it quickly became clear how essential it was for both myself and the team.

The DTR required that I accurately log every minute of my workday, and I had to ensure that I wasn't wasting any time. It was a bit challenging at first, especially since I was juggling multiple tasks, but I soon realized that it pushed me to be more mindful of how I spent my time. I began to prioritize tasks more effectively, ensuring that I tackled the most important ones first and left room for any unexpected tasks that might arise throughout the day.

In addition to better time management, I also learned how to stay organized. The DTR became a tool not only for tracking my hours but also for helping me keep track of my accomplishments for the day. It was satisfying to see how much I had done when I filled it out at the end of the day, and it gave me a sense of accomplishment.

As the days went on, I became more efficient with my time and tasks. I realized that it wasn't just about filling out the DTR for the sake of the record—it was about holding myself accountable for my time and progress. I learned how to be more disciplined with my schedule and to manage my workday with a clear sense of purpose.

By the time I completed my time at DENR-CENRO, I had developed skills in time management, organization, and focus that I know will serve me well in the future. The experience was a great reminder of how important it is to be intentional with my time, and how even small things, like filling out a daily record, can contribute to greater productivity and personal growth.

PERSONAL TRAIT #1

During my work immersion at school, the personality trait that stood out the most was my initiative. Rather than waiting around, I actively looked for ways to contribute, whether it was tidying up the work area, organizing materials, or assisting my peers with their tasks.

My ability to take initiative also extended to handling unexpected tasks. There were times when our supervisor was busy with other responsibilities, and I recognized that the work environment needed a little extra attention. Without being asked, I took it upon myself to complete these tasks, which not only kept things organized but also helped maintain the flow of work.

In addition to this, I developed a sense of responsibility through my proactive approach. By seeking out tasks to do, I was able to ensure that I wasn't just standing idle but was continuously contributing to the success of our work environment.

Overall, my initiative during the work immersion allowed me to stand out as someone who was not only dependable but also eager to contribute to the success of the class. This experience reinforced the importance of being proactive and taking responsibility, qualities that I will continue to apply in all future opportunities.

PERSONAL
TRAIT #1 REFLECTION

Reflecting on my work immersion at school, I realize how significant my initiative was in shaping my overall experience. Taking the lead in tasks, especially when there was no specific direction, taught me the value of being proactive and looking for ways to contribute without waiting for instructions. I found that by taking action when needed, I not only stayed productive but also helped create a more efficient and organized environment. This ability to step up when no one else did gave me a sense of purpose and pride in my work.

In addition to enhancing my productivity, my initiative helped me develop a strong sense of responsibility. It wasn't just about completing tasks, but about taking ownership of my role in the team's success. I began to understand that every small action I took had a direct impact on the overall flow of work, and I took pride in ensuring that things ran smoothly. This responsibility allowed me to build my leadership skills, as I learned how to manage my time and balance multiple tasks while ensuring that I contributed to the group's goals.

My proactive approach also deepened my appreciation for teamwork. Even when tasks were not directly assigned to me, I found that by offering to help my peers, I could create a more collaborative and supportive environment. It was fulfilling to see how small acts of initiative could encourage others to also pitch in, which made our group work more effective. The experience reinforced the idea that teamwork isn't just about fulfilling individual roles, but about contributing to the collective effort.

Overall, my work immersion allowed me to realize the importance of initiative in both personal and group contexts. I gained confidence in my ability to take responsibility and learned how taking the lead can positively influence the work environment. I am now more motivated to apply this proactive mindset in future opportunities, knowing that it will help me not only be a dependable team member but also someone who can drive progress and inspire others.

PERSONAL TRAIT #2

During my work immersion at DENR-CENRO, the personality trait that stood out the most was my communication skills and my joy in learning new things. I communicated with different team members, seeking guidance to clarify tasks. This experience allowed me to enhance my ability to effectively exchange information, ensuring I understood the work and contributed to the team's success.

Alongside my communication skills, I also developed a genuine joy in learning new tasks and skills. One of the most exciting aspects of my immersion was learning to encode data for reports. Though initially unfamiliar with the process, I embraced the opportunity to learn how to input and organize the information correctly.

This enthusiasm for learning extended to other areas as well. I was also introduced to using binoculars for environmental observation, a task I had never done before. I approached these new tools with curiosity and excitement, eager to understand their function and use them effectively.

Overall, my work immersion at DENR-CENRO allowed me to refine my communication skills and foster my enthusiasm for learning new things. These traits not only enhanced my experience at DENR-CENRO but also strengthened my overall personal and professional growth.

PERSONAL
TRAIT #2 REFLECTION

Reflecting on my work immersion at DENR-CENRO, I realize how much my communication skills and joy in learning new things played a crucial role in shaping my experience. I noticed that communicating clearly with my colleagues and supervisors was essential to ensuring that tasks were completed accurately and efficiently. Asking for clarification when necessary and providing updates on my progress helped foster a collaborative atmosphere, which made the entire work process smoother. Through these interactions, I became more confident in my ability to express myself and engage with others, skills I know will benefit me in future endeavors.

In addition to strengthening my communication abilities, I truly enjoyed the learning process during my immersion. Initially, I found tasks like encoding data and using binoculars for environmental observation a bit challenging, but I embraced these new experiences with enthusiasm. As I continued practicing, I became more comfortable and proficient, which made the tasks feel more rewarding. This experience reaffirmed my belief that learning new skills can be exciting and fulfilling, especially when you approach them with curiosity and a positive mindset.

The ability to stay curious and open to learning also helped me overcome obstacles. For example, when I was first introduced to the binoculars, I wasn't sure how to use them effectively, but I took the time to ask questions and observe how others used them. This eagerness to learn allowed me to quickly grasp the function of the tools and use them competently. This experience reinforced how important it is to approach unfamiliar tasks with an open mind and a willingness to embrace challenges.

Looking back, I realize how vital effective communication and a love for learning are in any work environment. These traits not only enhanced my immersion experience but also shaped my personal and professional growth. They have instilled in me a greater appreciation for teamwork and continuous improvement. Moving forward, I will carry these lessons with me, knowing that clear communication and an eagerness to learn are key to success in any career.

UPDATED RESUME

LABANG, SAFIYYAH HANAN A.

Phase IV Gallera Subd. Guiwan-Putik

0953 044 6560

labangsafiyyah@gmail.com

OBJECTIVE

A committed senior high school student aspiring to co-produce documentary films, dedicated to creating impactful stories as part of a dynamic media company.

EDUCATIONAL ATTAINMENT

Senior High School

Asia Academic School

(Batch 2023–2025)

Don Alfaro St., Tetuan, Zamboanga City, Philippines

Junior High School

Asia Academic School

(Batch 2017–2021, 2022–2023)

Don Alfaro St., Tetuan, Zamboanga City, Philippines

Ferndale International School

(Batch 2020–2022)

Alvarez, Veterans Avenue

Primary

Asia Academic School

(Batch 2017–2021)

Don Alfaro St., Tetuan, Zamboanga City, Philippines

Sarang Bangun Learning Center

(Batch 2014–2017)

Newslane, Baliwasan

International Philippines School of Jeddah

(Batch 2013–2014)

Mushrefah District, Jeddah 23336, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia

AWARDS AND CERTIFICATION

Secondary

- With High Honors | 2019-2025 (First semester)
- Leadership Award
- Service Award
- Class President (Grades 7, 10–12)
- School President (S.Y 2024-2025)
- Editor-in-chief (S.Y 2024-2025)
- Photojournalism Head (S.Y 2023-2025)
- DSPC 2025 - Photojournalism 1st placer
- Power Writing Year 5 & 6 - Photojournalism merit awardee
- FTTS Math Challenge (Champion) for category 7-8 (S.Y 2019-2020)
- Quipper Top Student (S.Y 2020-2021- S.Y 2023- 2024)
- KCC excellence Award

Primary

- Batch salutatorian (S.Y 2018-2019)
- Aba Model Awardee (2019)
- Board Member (S.Y 2017-2018)
- Consistent Honor Student

JOB EXPERIENCE

- Deployed at DENR- CENRO under Protected Area Management and Biodiversity Conservation Unit

SKILLS

- Photography
- Videography
- Video Editing
- Public speaking
- Adaptable
- Time management

INTEREST

- Journaling
- Baking
- Watching Films
- Collecting Merchandise

UPDATED
RESUME REFLECTION

Looking at my updated resume, I can clearly see how my academic achievements, leadership roles, and extracurricular involvement have shaped me into a well-rounded individual. The objective at the top of my resume—aspiring to co-produce documentary films—captures my long-term goal of telling impactful stories that educate and inspire audiences. This ambition has been influenced by my roles as Editor-in-Chief and Photojournalism Head, where I developed my skills in both writing and visual storytelling.

Academically, I am proud of the consistent honors I've earned. These accomplishments reflect my commitment to excellence and my strong work ethic. They also serve as a foundation upon which I've built my leadership and creative skills throughout my high school years.

My leadership experience is another significant part of my resume, showcasing my growth in roles such as Class President, School President, and Editor-in-Chief. These positions have taught me how to manage teams, collaborate effectively, and solve problems—skills that are critical for any career in media. As Photojournalism Head, I also developed an appreciation for the power of visual communication, which is crucial for documentary production.

Additionally, the recognition I've received in photojournalism competitions, such as my first-place finish in the DSPC 2025 contest, reflects my passion for creating compelling narratives through visuals. These achievements, combined with my leadership roles, have given me practical experience that aligns well with my future aspirations in media production.

Lastly, my recent deployment at the DENR-CENRO under the Protected Area Management and Biodiversity Conservation Unit has provided me with invaluable real-world experience. It has deepened my understanding of environmental issues, which I hope to address in future documentary films. Overall, my updated resume highlights the diverse skills and experiences that will help me achieve my goal of creating meaningful and impactful stories.

WORK IMMERSION HIGHLIGHT

WORK IMMERSION PHOTO HIGHLIGHT

My first work immersion experience, both at Asia Academic School and with DENR- CENRO, has truly been transformative. When I first stepped into this journey, I had no idea how much I was about to learn and grow. Over the course of just a few months, I not only discovered new aspects of my personality but also witnessed how far I could go in adapting to new environments and working alongside a wide range of people.

At school, I learned the importance of time management, communication, and collaboration. Each task I was assigned taught me the value of dedication, teamwork, and how to navigate challenges with grace. However, the immersion at Cenro was an entirely new level of growth. I found myself working with professionals from diverse backgrounds, each offering unique perspectives and insights. Whether I was involved in hands-on fieldwork or assisting in administrative tasks, I felt like I was truly contributing to something meaningful.

The best part of the experience was seeing how my personality evolved in ways I hadn't imagined. I became more confident in myself and my abilities, learning to take initiative and problem-solve effectively. The challenges I faced pushed me outside my comfort zone, teaching me resilience and patience.

Above all, this work immersion has shown me how adaptable I can be in various situations. Whether working with a team, handling pressure, or learning from others, I've gained invaluable skills that will shape my future endeavors. This experience will forever be one of the most cherished highlights not just of my Grade 12 life, but of my entire high school journey. I am incredibly grateful for the lessons I've learned and the personal growth I've achieved, and I will carry these experiences with me for the rest of my life.

WORK IMMERSION HIGHLIGHT REFLECTION

REFLECTION ON WORK IMMERSION HIGHLIGHT WRITING

Writing this reflection has given me the chance to pause and truly appreciate how much I've grown throughout my work immersion experience. At first, I didn't realize how impactful this journey would be. Looking back, I now see how each moment, whether challenging or rewarding, contributed to a deeper understanding of myself and the world around me.

What stood out most to me in reflecting on this experience was how much I learned about my own strengths and weaknesses. Before the immersion, I didn't fully understand my ability to adapt to different situations and people. But through this process, I've witnessed my confidence and ability to collaborate grow, especially in unfamiliar environments. It was humbling to realize that I could not only keep up but thrive in a professional setting, working alongside people from various backgrounds and skill sets.

I also gained a deeper sense of gratitude and respect for the people I worked with. Each person I met during my time at CENRO-DENR taught me something different. Whether it was their knowledge, work ethic, or way of communicating, I found myself constantly learning from those around me. This experience opened my eyes to the importance of teamwork and how each individual's role contributes to a bigger picture.

As I wrote this reflection, I realized just how much I've evolved as a person. I've grown not only in my professional abilities but also in my emotional resilience. The challenges I faced along the way shaped me into a more patient and thoughtful individual. This immersion was more than just a school requirement; it was an unforgettable chapter in my life that will continue to inspire and guide me as I move forward.

MISSION AND VISION

Mission And Vision

Safiyyah Hanan A. Labang

Gma Network, Philippines

Mission:

To capture and document the world's untold stories through photography and film, preserving moments that inspire, educate, and ignite change. With a deep commitment to continuous learning, I strive to explore the complexities of filmmaking, mastering both its technical and artistic aspects. Through cinematic storytelling, I seek to foster creativity, challenge perspectives, and create visually compelling narratives that resonate with diverse audiences. By blending documentary realism with artistic expression, my work aims to shed light on cultural, social, and human experiences, leaving a lasting impact on both individuals and communities.

Vision:

To become a highly skilled and influential documentary photographer and filmmaker, recognized for producing visually stunning and thought-provoking works that transcend boundaries. I envision a future where my films not only capture reality but also inspire meaningful conversations and creative exploration. Through a deeper understanding of film language, storytelling techniques, and visual aesthetics, I aim to push the boundaries of cinematic expression. Ultimately, my goal is to contribute to a world where photography and film serve as powerful tools for awareness, empathy, and artistic innovation, shaping a more creative and socially conscious society.

MISSION AND VISION REFLECTION

REFLECTION ON MISSION & VISION LETTER WRITING

Writing my mission and vision as an aspiring documentary filmmaker was a meaningful and thoughtful experience. It pushed me to deeply consider my core purpose and long-term goals in storytelling. I realized that my passion goes beyond just creating films — it's about giving a platform to voices that often go unheard and capturing the beauty and complexity of real-life experiences.

Defining my mission made me reflect on the type of filmmaker I want to be: one who crafts authentic and impactful narratives that inspire and educate audiences. It reminded me of the importance of storytelling as a tool for empathy and change.

Envisioning myself as a highly skilled filmmaker was both exciting and humbling. I recognized the hard work and continuous learning required to reach that goal. However, imagining this future motivated me even more to refine my craft and push creative boundaries.

This process not only clarified my aspirations but also strengthened my commitment to turning my passion for filmmaking into a meaningful career. Writing my mission and vision served as a reminder of why I started this journey and where I want it to lead.